Description

A new study have found that the airborne transmission of Covid-19 is a reality that had been underestimated. According to the report, a new term known as “super spreader” suggests there is a fair amount of airborne transmission taking place. On line for comment is Director for Research Development and Principal Investigator, Molecular Biology and Virology Research Laboratory at the University of Western Cape (UWC), Professor Burtram Fielding.

https://iono.fm/e/888633